Name on Vehicle Leads to Arrest of Joseph Ryan, Who Says He Feared Crowd.

The fact that two playmates saw the lettering on a truck which ran over and killed three-) an -old Nathan Liebursohn in front of his home at No. 155 East Fourth street, led to the arrest late last night of Joseph Ryan, the driver. Ryan said be had driven off because he feared the mob which quickly gathered. He said the killing vas entirely accidental, but was held a a homicide charge.

John Speer and Joseph Silverman, two schoolboys, were playing with the little boy when the truck ran over him and then disappeared around the next corner. They saw the lettering "J. Dangier, Provision merchand, 122 Myrtle avenue, Brooklyn." A large crowd immediately gathered and the child was carried to a neighboring drug store.

Dr. Leist was summoned from Believue Hospital, and saw that the child was dead.

Just then a white haired woman edged her way through the crowd in the street.

"Who's hurt?" she asked a boy.

"Little Nathan Liebersohn's killed."

"Little Nathan Liebersohn's killed," answered the boy.

With a cry she rushed into the drug store, where a group of men stood about the body. She took one look at the dead boy, then grabbed him up and rushed from the place. She was Nathan's grandmother.

When the Coroner reached the home and ordered the body removed to the Morgue for an autopsy the aged woman fought with her feeble strength against the removal. The boy's mother was hysterical.

or was hysterical.

"JACK LONDON" HUNTS GOLD.

This J. L. Alleged Shoplifter, and Woman Detective Catches Him.

Weman Detective Catches Him.

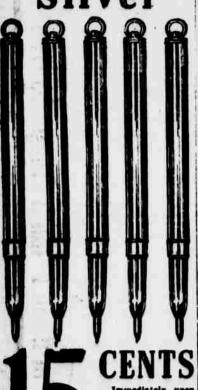

The sight of a negro fleeing through Fulton street, with a little woman, blowing a police whistle, hanging to his coattails, caused great excitement yesterday afternoon in the shopping district of Brooklyn. They ran from the door of Matthewa's store to Smith street and in that thoroughfare to Livingston street, where the negro was tripped. Then Patrolman Heary McCarren seized him. The pursuer was Miss May H. Florence, a detective in Matthewa's. She said she had seen the negro take two gold rings and a lavalliere from a counter and she had seized him. In the Adams Street Court he was held in 100 for Special Sessions. He described himself as Jack London, twenty-one years, of No. 316 Clark street, Brooklyn. There is no such number on that street.

A New Style Turban An Excellent Novelty, in a New Shape

Offered Here, $1.95 The style shown is a new shape with a silk velver brim, turning at the top and imparting a new and Smart effect.

The soft crown is made of silk and covered with maline. The trimming is a wired "ear" of silk velvet with a knot of maline.

Another style shows a silk velvet coronet brim with a soft crown of faille silk, with several rows of maline inserted between the brim and crown. Two wired "ears" of silk velvet at the front complete this remarkable creation.
